ASSESS YOUR ORGANIZATION'S COLLABORATION-READINESS

Communication is the key to a successful business. Organizations that share and disseminate information effectively outperform their competitors. Assess your collaboration readiness by asking yourself these questions:

- Do you have an information architecture?
- Do you know how your organization communicates and collaborates on proposals, contracts and sales materials?
- Do you have visibility into all your projects?
- Can executives view dashboards that detail your organization's real-time performance?
- Does your computing environment constrain your work style, and do you have access to the same tools and information at all times?
- Does your organization have an information rights management strategy, and do you protect your digital assets effectively?

People, technology and data are often under-utilized because they operate in an insular fashion. It takes experienced collaboration professionals to pull together systems, optimize collaboration software and properly train employees to achieve truly ground-breaking efficiencies.
